2. The problem of dual compensation is involved whenever CIA employs a retired officer, and this case is no exception. In order for this office to advise with respect to type of contract, it is necessary to ascertain the proposed arrangements between the individual and CIA. If, in this case, the arrangements with [redacted] are substantially similar to those made with [redacted] the contract should be amended at paragraph 1.d. to read ".50.00 per consultation." In this situation the fee to be paid has no relation to time and is simply payable on the basis of each consultation.

3. Since the contract may be amended, it would be necessary to secure the [redacted] signature on such an amendment. It is suggested that this office can be of greater assistance in the future if the contracts involving this type of case are discussed prior to the actual signing of the contract by the individual concerned.
